EXPERIENCE

I began my professional career as a graphic designer whose focus was solely on corporate identity, but I quickly shifted to digital when I found out how forgiving the medium could be. The ever-changing medium kept me guessing. Lately I've been creating guerrilla-style campaigns built on low budgets. Like, shoestring budgets. I have been told my typography and layout skills would make any mother proud. Other interests of mine include photography and pretending to know more about music than you. I'm efficient with time and budgets. I create genuine relationships with clients. My experience has ranged from small boutique design shops to large corporate ad agencies. I prefer to follow a project through from concept to completion. I consider myself a multidisciplinary, or in more creative words, a visual communication swiss army knife.
